Annual Dues

Membership is categorized by the role your company plays in the automatic identification and data capture technology industry.

Regular Member: A company (or named division of a company) whose primary business is selling automatic identification and data capture technology including consultant, independent software vendor, manufacturer, OEM, reseller, and system integrator

Distributor Member: A company (or named division of a company) whose primary business is distributing automatic identification and data capture technology and providing fulfillment, marketing services, and managed services to resellers on behalf of the manufacturer.

Non-AIDC: Member company (or named division of a company) whose primary business is selling products or services that are not automatic identification and data capture technology

Academic Member: An academic institution

Government Member: Government entity

Nonprofit Member: A registered nonprofit organization

Start-Up/Introductory Member: A company who has been in business less than 3 years and whose yearly revenue is anticipated to be less than $3M/year. Membership at the Start-Up/Introductory Member level is limited to one year.

User Member: A company (or named division of a company) that does not sell but rather uses automatic identification and data capture technology in the course of its business

Annual dues are based on your membership category.

- Regular member dues are based on the company's gross annual sales associated with the automatic identification and data capture market.
- Non-AIDC member dues are based on the company's gross annual sales
- Academic, Distribution, Government, Non-Profit, Introductory, and User member dues are a flat rate.

Please select the appropriate membership category from the drop-down box below.
